Explanation of Customization & Styling Pages
Overall, since the website is about F1 and my background with F1, I decided to adopt the Ferrari color scheme of bright red and black with white and yellow accents since that is my favorite team. I also changed the font to a sans-serif font since that aligns best F1 and Ferrari branding. I created an interactive nav bar at the top of the webpage that changes color when hovered upon and highlights the current tab in red to make the page easier to use and more engaging. I center-aligned all the headers at the top of the page to indicate that that is the title of the page and what to expect from the content. I left-aligned all other content, including subheaders and pictures, so that it is easier to parse through the main ideas and content on each page, especially if more information/content is added onto this in the future. On the About Me page, I created a special box for my contact information to make it stand out and integrate it better into the About Me section compared to creating a new header for Contact Me with only two links below it. I also made the bullet points interactive as hovering over either bullet point will change the font color to red, which will help indicate to the user that the bullet points are something that they can click on to email me (mail to) or view my LinkedIn.
